After a spooktacular fortnight of previews in Wigan last Halloween, my new horror play IT WALKS AROUND THE HOUSE AT NIGHT, made by the amazing ThickSkin Theatre, is about to hit the road. Hit it, and pass straight through it, cos it's a ghooooststttt, woooooo

I am amazed to say that demand for tickets has been... frankly quite wild, people clearly love a ghost play... so IWATHAN [1] has nearly sold out at most of its venues. If you're hoping to see it in Chichester, Ipswich, Watford, Stockton-on-Tees, Keswick or Leeds, please check the links here to see if you can still squeeze in!

The sensible thing to do would be to add another stop to the tour, right?

Right.

I'm super-duper stoked to say that IT WALKS AROUND THE HOUSE OF NIGHT will be floating into London this March for an epic four-week run!

The show will play at Southwark Playhouse Borough, 4-28 March.

When I lived in London, I went to the Southwark Playhouse all the gosh darn time. They had the Papatango Winners (Stew Pringle's TRESTLE <3). And it was great for new American writing. And obscure revivals, lovingly brought back. And I'll never forget the lockdown-prescience of Sam Steiner's YOU STUPID DARKNESS! (I'm looking at the date of my ticket, that was in Feb 2020, madness…) The quality and variety of the work made it a destination venue for me, so I'm thrilled that our spooky play is rocking up there.

Important notice: Southwark Playhouse has two locations, so to flag - we are in the Borough location on Newington Causeway, in 'The Large'. This is the older and therefore the most haunted of the two.

I also remember loving the bar area? Just truly excellent vibes. Expect me to be sitting around post-show with a tasty pint, if you'd like to say hi. It's just so lovely to be back in London with a play so soon after JURASSIC. I'll leave the capital alone for a bit after this, I promise.

But until then, keep following my French adventures...

Lyon in Winter

I visited Lyon for the New Year. Gorgeous city. Bloody freezing. The area we stayed in was mainly populated by women who were eighty-plus, so muffled in designer coats that the only way they identified each other was by their chunky spectacles. Oh, and by their dogs. They had lots and lots of dogs, attached on taut colourful leads - big tall slim ones, ...

...and remember! You can pre-order the playtext for IT WALKS, which comes in a fun bumper volume feat. JURASSIC! Gosh, we're spoiling you.
